Fighting fund for Madeleine

The McCann family has ploughed their efforts into setting up an appeal fund in their search for the missing four year old Madeleine.

Her father Gerry flew back to the UK for a brief trip last Sunday night so that arrangements could be put in place for the organisation of the appeal and to enable the family to remain in Praia da Luz. They plan to stay in the Mark Warner resort with their two year old twins Sean and Amelie while they continue their agonizing wait for the safe return of their older daughter.

Pictures of Madeleine were screened at the FA cup final in Wembley stadium last Saturday and a website containing many images of the child has received over 97 million hits and thousands of messages from well-wishers. The Find Madeleine fighting fund will be used to further the investigation and to continue to publicise the case. Michael Wright, a close friend of the family, told reporters that "Gerry and Kate are taking immense strength from the support and good wishes that they are receiving from all over the world."

Police have confirmed that a telephone conversation did take place between 33 year old British man Robert Murat and Russian IT consultant Sergey Malinka, 22, on the night of her disappearance, 3 May. Chief Inspector Olegário de Sousa handling the investigation has stated that as yet they do not have sufficient evidence for an arrest. Both men deny any involvement. Reports of possible sightings have so far come to nothing but police in Portugal have assured the family that everything is being done to find their daughter. Mr Murat, a local resident, assisted the police with translation work at the start of the enquiry but was then given arguido status two weeks later meaning he is an official suspect. The system allows him to request this status in order to have police protection and be allowed to clear his name if he is innocent of any wrongdoing.

The Portuguese community will be praying tonight at 10pm in an united action of support for the McCann family. The national prayer was organised by the Congregation of Carmelite Sisters sending an e-mail to all local parishes asking that all communities come together at this time. Father José Manuel Pacheco, priest at the Luz parish church, made the announcement on Sunday.

Fire on Cutty Sark

The 19th Century Cutty Sark caught fire overnight on Sunday causing major damage to the 138 year old ship, the oldest tea clipper in the world. The area around the Sark had to be evacuated due to the threat of gas cylinders on board exploding. Residents nearby had to be taken to a Greenwich hotel while fire fighters sought to contain the blaze which is being viewed as suspicious. The town centre of Greenwich was sealed off to traffic and the Docklands Light Railway closed. The historic ship was closed to the public for two years during 25 million pounds of conservation work partly supported by the Heritage Lottery Fund.

GAZA

Israeli attacks

Israel has launched air strikes in Gaza following warnings about rocket attacks landing on their soil.

Israeli jets bombed a number of Hamas targets including part of a building belonging to the Executive Force, a militia force assigned with maintaining security in the city, and a second attack was on a car carrying militants. Israel has issued severe threats against the Palestinian militants who fired at the border area over recent weeks. Before this recent eruption of violence, there were talks of a meeting with Israeli presidential aide Saeb Erekat, but this is on hold for the time being.

Violence in Gaza had subsided, prior the Israeli attacks, after intense fighting continued to threaten to undermine the new coalition government. While the Hamas-Fatah officials tried to govern, militants were killing and wounding each other on the streets. A total of 46 deaths were reported by Palestinian officials. Residents have managed to return to near-normal activities but there are fears that the situation could break down again at any time. Many local people simply barricaded themselves inside their homes until the fighting stopped, terrified at the sounds of gunfire right outside their doors.

One local reporter saw people shot in front of the building where he sat in a hallway with his wife and nine month old baby. There were people trapped in burning buildings unable to escape because of gunmen outside. At one point gunmen tried to take over the reporter's apartment directly opposite a Palestinian government complex where both sides were fighting for control. They wanted to shoot from his window but the reporter managed to per-suaude them to leave.

At the funerals of two Hamas militants in the town of Rafah, violence ended in the death of one man and around 20 injured when guns being fired into the air as is the custom at funerals were turned by Fatah militants into a bloody battle.

• Palestinians gather at the demolished building used by Hamas's Executive Force.

Priest sparks protest

A row has divided members of the quiet village of Asson in south west France following a catholic priest's admission that he has had a relationship with a woman for 22 years. Many villagers are in support of their former priest who had to leave the clergy when the relationship was made public. Leon and Marga are now able to appear together in public having admitted their secret. Catholic priests take a vow to remain celibate. Father Leon claims the relationship has brought him closer to God and his congregation stating that Marga has been a great support to his work as parish priest, a job that he did well until the scandal erupted. Marga is a devout Catholic and is hurt by the church's attitude to the man she loves. The village has held a protest demanding his return to continue his work.

COLOMBIA

Hostage escaped

John Frank Pinchao has made a miraculous escape following nine years in captivity. He was working as a Colombian policeman in 1998 in the town of Mitu when he was seized by rebels belonging to the Farc, the Revolutionary Armed Forces of Colombia. Pinchao was held along with around 60 others captured in different situations. He waited eight and a half years for an opportunity to escape and his chance came when he was held in the Amazon jungle. He took his chance and escaped into the dense jungle and had to survive for 17 days before finding an army patrol last Wednesday. He hopes his successful escape does not cause further difficulties for the others remaining. Other prisoners at the hostage camp include three US intelligence agents and Colombia's former presidential candidate, Ingrid Betancourt, captured in February 2002.

UK

Prince Harry grounded

Chief of Staff Sir Richard Dannatt has decided that the third in line to the throne will not be allowed to serve his country in Iraq despite his willingness to do so. The decision was made in light of recent threats, exposing him and his comrades to unnecessary additional risk over and above that which already exists in Iraq. Harry is apparently "very disappointed" with the decision but is not intending to leave the army as was reported by some members of the press in the past. Dannatt told the press: "He has proved himself both at Sandhurst and in command of his troop during their training. I commend him for his determination and his undoubted talent - and I do not say that lightly. His soldiers will miss his leadership in Iraq, although I know his commanding officer will provide a highly capable substitute troop leader."

Indian whisky take-over

The Scottish whisky distiller Whyte and Mackay has been bought out by Indian billionaire Vijay Mallah. The group is responsible for the production of many famous brands including Dalmore and Jura whisky, Glavya liqueur and Vladivar vodka. The new chairman has impressed many with his "Richard Branson" style approach including taking his Kingfisher beer brand to the skies with the airlines. Mallah talked of his emotional attachment to the firm with one of its single malts, Jura whisky, being his late father's favourite drink. He talks of expansion and not job losses to the group, planning to take the drinks range into the emerging markets where growth is vital for future business. Amid concerns about the relocating of the Dalmore distillery to India Mallah stressed, "Scotch whisky can only be made in Scotland".

And it's goodbye

Tony Blair has held his final talks as Prime Minister with President Bush. Subjects discussed included Iraq, climate change and the crisis in Darfur, prior to the G8 summit next month. Mr Blair had dinner in the White House following a television interview where he praised George Bush as a strong leader, true to his word. Commenting on America's role in world politics he said: "The biggest danger is if America disengages, if it decides to pull up the drawbridge and say to the rest of the world 'Well you go and sort it out.' We need America engaged."

Sea view with corpse

Jorge Giro got more than he expected when he bought a house on the Spanish Catalonian coast. He purchased the house by auction without viewing the property and was shocked to find the previous owner was still inside. She had died and was still sitting on the sofa when he entered his new home. Apparently the body had been partly mummified by the salty sea air. Forensic scientists estimate that the woman known as Maria Luisa died in 2001.

Food shortages

Record inflation and poor agricultural methods have led to a shortage in staple food supplies in Zimbabwe. Wheat is in short supply due to late planting of crops as a result of the rapid decline in the agricultural sector following the removal of white farmers. Officials claim that farmers have only planted 10 per cent of the expected winter wheat crop and there is already a national sugar shortage. This combined with the current drought conditions will lead the nation to depend heavily on imported food.

Hunger strike

Fourteen defendants in the Madrid train bombing trial have undertaken a hunger strike in protest over what they term unjust accusations against them. The 29 defendants are predominantly Moroccan and are suspected of having been involved in the 2004 bombings which killed 191 people and injured around 1,700. The court proceedings are expected to last five months.

ASIA

Return train journey

North and South Korea have made a largely symbolic gesture allowing two trains, one from North to South and vice versa to cross the border for the first time in 50 years. One hundred and fifty passengers were invited to travel on each train, travelling 25 km across the heavily armed border. The breakthrough in diplomatic relations follows economic aid supplied by South Korea to aid North Korea's plight as it struggles with basic supplies of fuel oil and food. Celebrations were held on the platforms of stations including hundreds of reunification flag wavers on Munsan station in west South Korea. Passengers on board the South Korean train spoke of being warmly welcomed in the north. Children bearing flowers welcomed the North Korea train into Jejin station. The south has been asking for this service for many years to improve relations and to enable easier transport into China. The lines were reconnected two years ago by South Korea and all landmines and tank traps were removed.

AFRICA

Somalia peacekeeping

Ugandan soldiers have decided to remain in Somalia to assist in peacekeeping in spite of recent attacks including the killing of four soldiers in a convoy patrol. The bodies of the men were flown back to their native Uganda, the only nation to send peacekeeping troops to Somalia. A roadside bomb was also set to explode as a convoy containing the prime minister of Somalia, Ali Mohamed Ghedi, passed by, but it failed to hurt anyone. African Union Commission chairman Alpha Omar Konare condemned the attack urging the Ugandan soldiers to remain engaged in the "noble action" of assisting Somalia. There are plans for an additional 8,000 African Union troops to be sent in from the Ethiopian army to take over security duties.

USA

President resigns

Paul Wolfowitz, president of the World Bank, has resigned with effect from 30 June. He was found to have breached bank rules by authorising a pay rise and promotion for his girlfriend, Shaha Riza, also working for the institution. When Wolfowitz accepted the position he told the bank that his girlfriend was already an employee and took steps to avoid a conflict of interest. He is now criticised for violating the terms of his contract and breaking the professional code of the bank. The Board of the bank accepted his claims that his errors whilst at the institution were made in good faith.

INDIA

Wedding tragedy

A road accident in Hyderabad, the capital of the state of Andhra Pradesh, involving a van and a lorry has resulted in the deaths of 21 people, all members of a wedding party. The groom was one of the many killed. Senior policeman Anil Kumar said: "The accident occurred when the speeding lorry hit the wedding party vehicle at a blind turning in the early hours."

There have been further deaths caused by a heat wave in the same Indian state where 36 people died in one day with temperatures reaching 48°C. Many animals also died including around 3,000 cows, buffaloes and sheep. Government officials handed out rehydration salts in an attempt to assist those suffering from heatstroke.

Brown succeeds Blair

Chancellor Gordon Brown will take over as Prime Minister when Tony Blair steps down on 27 June. He received 313 votes for the position of Labour leader meaning he will not need to contest the position. His only rival, John McDonnell, known for his left wing approach, got only 29 of the 45 votes needed to contest the position. There will however be a vote for the deputy leader following the resignation of John Prescott. Six candidates have succeeded in meeting the required number of nominations. They include International Development Secretary Hilary Benn, backbencher Jon Cruddas, Education Secretary Alan Johnson, Justice Minister Harriet Harman, Northern Ireland Secretary Peter Hain and Labour chairman Hazel Blears.

The election will be held in three sections, each representing 33 per cent of the total vote, with labour MPs and Euro MPs in the first section, Labour Party members on 31 May and the third section, the votes from members of affiliated trade unions. The winning candidate must have 50 per cent of the vote. If the percentage is not achieved, the last-placed candidate is eliminated and the second-placed candidate on their form is counted. Each vote card allows candidates to be placed in order of priority with a ranking of 1 to 6. The result will be announced on 24 June.

THE LOWDOWN

...on Armação de Pêra.

Once just a small fishing village on a huge expanse of beach, this central Algarve resort is a favourite among Portuguese and overseas visitors. We interviewed Pauline Serman to find out more about the town and what it has to offer.

Why Armação de Pêra?

Pauline and her husband Richard have lived part-time in the town for over seven years, visiting their second home in the sun several months each year. We interviewed Pauline and literally walked the town flat, having learnt that a major feature of Armação de Pêra is that it is all on one level and therefore easier to navigate for elderly residents or anyone who needs assistance, a feature not always found in west Algarvean towns. There are excellent transport links, useful for people without a car, including a good bus service and Alcantarilha Gare (train station) a short taxi ride of about eight kilometres. Walkers will love the challenge of being able to take the beach and cliff footpaths all the way along the coastline to Albufeira. Pauline was also keen to stress how helpful the local people are, bending over backwards to explain things and help out. Finally of course there is the excellent weather throughout most of the year.

Availability of schools

The International School in Porches is very close, ideally situated for families with children wanting to follow the British system. There are also excellent Portuguese state schools including a crèche for babies, Jardim de Infancia for ages three to five and then the primary and secondary schools, all within the town itself.

The beach

This has to be one of the most wonderful beaches in Portugal, with around 8km of golden sands next to the impressive cliffs and at the eastern end the working fishermen's huts providing a picturesque backdrop to the beach where individual boat trips go fishing or visit the caves are offered.

Activities

Winters used to be very quiet here but Pauline and Richard have both noticed there are more and more things going on now, particularly over the quieter months, to suit all tastes. The Hotel Garbe offers a wide programme of events. Pauline personally recommends the writing course and theatre dinners. There are also painting workshops and summer BBQs and many other events advertised on the website www.hotelgarbe.com

Local Attractions

The Hotel Garbe offers a range of excursions throughout the Algarve and beyond.

There are boat trips to the grottoes from the fishermen's beach and in the summer months the boats pick you up from the beach for a worthwhile tour of local sea caves and a view of the coastline from a different perspective.

Zoomarine and the water parks are only minutes away by car, and all of them provide a pick-up service in peak season.

There is also a small cinema.

Golfing

The nearest courses are in Carvoeiro and the Salgados course.

Comparison between high and low season

There is no denying that Armação de Pêra gets very packed in August with Portuguese tourists who own many of the large number of high-rise apartments in the resort but for the rest of the year it is pretty uncrowded and no matter when you visit there is enough beach space for everyone.

Future plans for the area

There has been talk of a new casino on the site of the old one and promises of a new football ground but as yet nothing has happened. While there has been a large amount of development there is now protection from further major projects with more stringent controls in place than in recent years.

Shopping facilities

One of the great attractions of the town for Pauline is the fact that it is of sufficient size to have everything close to hand but still remains personal and friendly, much like the town they live in near Oxford in the UK. You can buy everything you need on foot, as the town has a good selection of supermarkets, a daily fish and vegetable market (mornings only), bakeries, pharmacies (including all night opening), post office and many lovely craft and artisan shops. The Mini Preço on the main street near to the Garbe Hotel offers excellent value for those on holiday not wishing to walk too far. Plus on the main road at the roundabout with the GNR police station is also a favourite, as is Pingo Doce on the main through road taking you back out of town.

On Saturday mornings there is an outdoor farmers' market around the covered market.

Maria's, selling furniture and things for the home, is excellent. It is located near the market and the pedestrian street.

Medical facilities

The state health (Centro de Saúde) centre is excellent.

There is also a superb service operated by the Red Cross with trained volunteers on hand to attend incidents, often appearing before a state-run ambulance service is able to arrive.

House prices

An average new two bedroom apartment can be bought for around €130,000 although prices vary considerably. A four bedroom detached villa with pool can cost anything from around €450,000 upwards, but these tend to be on the road out of town.

Recommended hotel

The Hotel Garbe is a four star hotel with amazing views of the beach, with pool (heated) and 187 bedrooms. Tel 282 320 260 www.hotelgarbe.com. Pauline uses this hotel a lot for guests staying on holidays.

Transport links

The bus terminal offers regular services to Albufeira, Silves and Portimão. Nearest train station is Alcantarilha Gare.

Drive time to Faro airport and directions

45 minutes signposted from the A22, taking the Alcantarilha exit.

Eating out in Armação de Pêra

Great little restaurant but only open in the winter months located one street back from the seafront at the Garbe end of the town. There is a small Marachino supermarket close by that is visible from the seafront and a small Galp petrol station at the other end of the road. A personal favourite with a great tourist menu.

Almadrava

R. General Humberto Delgado. Tel 282 083 278.

Near the post office, a few streets in from the beach offering great food including good fish and meat dishes. Open daily.

Estrela do Mar

Praia do Pescadores (fishermen's beach)

This unpretentious setting offers a superb value tourist menu with panoramic views of the beach, with its terrace set among the brightly painted fishing boats. The meals are basic and inexpensive offering a good selection of the day's catch and typical Portuguese dishes including the staple meat, pork. It is the last wooden hut near to the football stadium. Open daily except Monday.

Ze Leiteiro

Rua Portos do Mar

This is real Portuguese cooking at its best but only if you enjoy fish. The menu is very simple; as much fish as you want for €10, children over four pay €6. Salad included. One of Pauline's friends was so impressed he went again the following night after saying he didn't like fish but was persuaded to try it anyway. Closed Monday.

Bollywood and the Raj

For those who want Indian food, Bollywood looks out onto the fishermen's beach and the Raj is inside the Garbe.

Serol

Rua Portas do Mar, 2.

This beach front restaurant again near the fishermen's beach is very popular with tourists and local Portuguese. It is more expensive but is the real deal when it comes to eating Portuguese food. Specialising in sea food and charcoal grills you will always have a good meal here. The restaurant seats over 60 so there is usually availability. Tel 282 312 146. Closed Wednesday.

Gaia receives overseas investment

Forty million euros are to be invested in a luxury development on the banks of the river Douro in Vila Nova de Gaia by British investors Squarstone Atlantic Regeneration, among others.

The project is part of an ongoing campaign by the municipality to acquire foreign investment in an attempt to renovate the riverside area in Gaia. The developments by Squarstone will incorporate luxury homes consisting of one, two and three-bedroom units. The British company is to develop various sites among which is the old Alcohol Distillery, built towards the end of the 19th Century by a colleague of the world famous Gustav Eiffel, and according to the architect, Pedro Balonas, the homes will be aimed at those with an "elevated buying power". Another site is that of the Hard Club, a disco in the area, now renamed the Rei Ramiro Terrace. Again, luxury homes are planned with views over the river to Porto and it was reported that a swimming pool will crown the roof of the new building.

Robert Sloss of Squarstone Atlantic Regeneration made it clear that the company intends to invest in further projects on the river front in Gaia and in Porto too. It is hoped that the works will start as soon as possible and that the buildings be finished by the end of 2008.

Another major investment in Gaia, and nominated a Project of National Interest (PIN), is the Yeatman hotel, a five-star hotel and wine spa, an investment by the Fladgate Partnership, owners of famous Port names like Taylor's, Fonseca, Croft and DelaForce. The 84-room hotel is scheduled to open in 2009 and is to be built into the steep slopes of Gaia overlooking the UNESCO World Heritage city of Porto.

www.decanter.com reported that Adrian Bridge, managing director of the Fladgate Partnership said that: "We will be moving our ageing facility out to near the vineyards in the Douro. This leaves Gaia to develop its tourism infrastructure, where visitors will still be able to see barrel ageing and the history of port, but will not be affected by lorries and delivery trucks." The project incorporates an infinity pool, two restaurants and a wine spa, concepts which have proven successful in both Bordeaux, France and Rioja in Spain.

Luís Filipe Menezes, mayor of Gaia, has been actively seeking foreign investment for the town and claims that these projects represent just a part of investments totally around one billion euros for the municipality. He affirmed that the historical area would not become a "place for the rich" and that social housing was included in the investments. Menezes claims that the investments in Gaia represent about "a quarter of foreign investment in Portugal".

No to quick divorce

A project put forward by the Left Bloc (BE) with regard to divorce was rejected by the Socialists (PS), the Social Democrats (PSD) and the Popular Party (CDS-PP). The project outlined that divorce need only be requested by one of the parties, without the obligation of revealing a motive or the necessity of proving "violation of conjugal duties", and after two separate conferences and a reflection period of three months. Socialist, Sónia Sanfona admitted that a reduction in the period of separation in litigious divorce cases, currently three years, was considered reasonable by the PS. The other opposing parties also criticised the plan with Montalvão Machado, PSD calling it "intolerable and inadmissible". Helena Pinto defended the bill, claiming it protected spouses whose rights had been abused, adding: "We are not proposing divorce in an hour, but we are clearly against discordant and forced marriage."

More hashish seized

Two Britons and one Irishman were arrested in possession of over 2.500 kilos of hashish by the Judicial Police in the Alentejo on Monday 14 May. The three men, between 44 and 62 years old, all resident in Malaga, Spain, were intercepted by the police near Almodóvar in a hired vehicle. The police subsequently located a warehouse in the Grândola area in which just under 2.500 kilos of hashish was stored. Police say that these arrests are the result of an investigation which has been underway for some months and that the suspects are part of a large scale drug trafficking organisation, working in various European countries, principally the UK. Police believe one of the suspects to be one of the top men within the organisation. The street value of the hashish is estimated at 50 million euros. The investigation is to continue incorporating international cooperation.

New minister appointed

Rui Pereira was sworn in by Cavaco Silva, president of the Portuguese Republic as the new minister of the interior, replacing António Costa. Pereira leaves his post as judge in the Constitutional Court to attend to his new duties, whilst Costa leaves to run as the Socialist candidate for the Lisbon council elections.

Doctor cleared

In the ongoing Casa Pia child abuse case, Dr Rui Pias was absolved of any charges last Thursday. He was accused of testing allegedly hundreds of blood samples from the wards for sexually transmitted diseases.

Number crunching

The INE released the unemployment statistics for the first quarter of 2007 which showed a figure of 8,4 per cent of the Portuguese population as unemployed, the highest rate for many years.

Banned medication

One of Portugal's best-selling drugs, namely nimesulida, has been banned in Ireland due to adverse effects on the liver. Portugal was to decide whether to withdraw the drug on Monday, after a meeting of The European Agency for the Evaluation of Medicinal Products. The drug is a popular anti-inflammatory and is widely used among those suffering from rheumatism.

Bullfight protests

Around 200 people from more than 20 different international organisations demonstrated in front of the Campo Pequeno in Lisbon last Thursday night. The bullring was host to a top-name programme that evening to mark its first anniversary since being renovated. The protest served as a preliminary event to an international summit against bullfighting which took place in Lisbon last weekend.

Portugal pledges support for Serbia

In Belgrade last week Portugues foreign minister, Luis Amado told his Serbian counterpart, Vuk Jeremic that during its presidency of Europe, beginning on 1 July, Portugal would be taking advantage to refocus attention on the integration of the Balkan states within the EU.

Amado said: "We want new generations in this region, especially Serbia, to realise their duty and enormous responsibility that Europe be a world leader, a force of peace, of stability and equilibrium in the international system."

Jeremic expressed his gratitude for "Portugal's total support" with regard to Serbia's position within the EU, applauding Amado's understanding and knowledge of the political problems which the country faces. The Serbian minister added that he had agreed with Amado to "maintain direct contact over the next months" in order that the "integration of Serbia becomes a reality as quickly as possible". He mentioned, as an example, the liberalisation of visas with participating countries under the Schengen agreement, for which they would count on Portugal's "great technical knowledge and experience in advising new EU member states."

The Serbian president Boris Tadic met later with Amado (pictured below), making it clear that although Serbia wanted to join the EU it would not give up its interest in Kosovo. He stressed that he considered it "unacceptable" that the province be awarded independence, that such an eventuality would prove "problematic" and serve to "destabilise not just Serbia, but the whole region".

Amado replied that Portugal understood that the "stability of the region was decisive with regard to European stability", adding that Europe would "assume its responsibilities". He added that "I believe we can succeed in finding solutions for complicated problems."

The EU suspended negotiations for the Stabilisation and Association Process with Belgrade a year ago due to insufficient cooperation on the part of Serbia with the International Court of Justice for ex-Yugoslavia, in the issue of war crimes committed during the three major conflicts that affected the area in the nineties.

In Belgrade Amado also met with deputy prime minister, Bozidar Djelic and prime minister, Vuk Draskovic. His visit to Belgrade concluded a series of visits to three of the Balkan states, namely Slovenia, Croatia and Serbia.

Candidates abound

The race to lead Lisbon council is on, with the announcement being made on Monday 14 May that the elections would be held on 1 July. The date was contested by independent candidate, ex-PS militant, Helena Roseta, as there was no time for parties to consider coalition candidates, as these would have had to be registered by the end of the same day. Late Friday evening the Constitutional Court reached a decision proclaiming the date void. It has been rumoured, but not confirmed when going to press, that the new date will be 15 July.

- Fernando Negrão – PSD
- Helena Roseta – Independente
- Ruben de Carvalho – CDU
- José Sá Fernandes – BE

Drink/drug driving law

From 15 August the new rules governing driving under the influence of alcohol or drugs comes into effect, after being published last Thursday in the Diário da República. For the first time drug use is also to be taken into consideration and those testing positive for opiates, cocaine, amphetamines and cannabis derivatives will be subject to a confirmatory test within thirty days of the first. Authorised test centres within the public health service are yet to be published by local authorities. Samples to test for drug use can come from most bodily fluids like, urine, perspiration, saliva or blood.

Fatal accident

The A1 near Albergaria-a-Velha, Aveiro was the scene of an accident which caused the closure of both lanes of the motorway last Wednesday night. A heavy goods vehicle overturned dumping its cargo of steel all over the road. The driver of the vehicle was taken to hospital where he died. The motorway was closed for more than eight and a half hours whilst the authorities were removing the wreckage and cargo.

Street racing returns

This October sees the return of the famous street races in the historic city of Vila Real in northern Portugal and the government is backing the initiative with €500,000. The Vila Real Races were halted in 1991 after a succession of serious accidents on the city streets. The return of the races is hoped to realise a return of around €1,3 million for the region's economy with hotels, restaurants and commerce benefiting from the visitors and participants of the event. The races organised by the municipal council in conjunction with the Automobile Club of Vila Real began in 1931 and were always considered a valuable source of income for the area.

THINKING

Not in the flesh

Vegetarianism is more than just not eating meat. There are various types of vegetarians and many different motivations for making that choice.

Vegetarianism is the practice of not eating the meat of any animal. This is the definition of a diet that presents some varieties - vegan, lacto-ovo vegetarianism (from Latin, lacto means milk, ovo means egg), lacto vegetarianism and ovo vegetarianism.

Veganism is "a philosophy and way of life which seeks to exclude all forms of exploitation of, and cruelty to, animals for food, clothing or any other purpose", as defined by the UK Vegan Society. Lacto-ovo vegetarianism includes eggs and milk and their derivatives in the diet, like butter, yoghurts or cheese; the lacto vegetarian excludes eggs and consumes milk and its derivatives; and the ovo vegetarian eats eggs but no dairy products. Other dietary practices commonly associated with vegetarianism are fruitarianism - a diet based on fruits. The macrobiotic diet is based on whole grains and beans, but not all macrobiotics are vegetarians. The raw vegetarianism is a diet of fresh and uncooked vegetables. The Freeganism promotes a lifestyle free from all commodities produced under capitalism.

To be or not to be

The reasons that people choose to become vegetarian can be various. Religion is one. The majority of the world's vegetarians are Hindu. Hinduism and Jainism take vegetarianism as a moral conduct, an ideal. In the Jewish religion people are permitted to consume meat, with some restrictions, for example the eating of meat and dairy products together is forbidden. In Buddhism, the views on vegetarianism vary from school to school. In Christianity, the Seventh-day Adventists present a health message that recommends its followers opt to be vegetarian.

Many people choose to be vegetarians in order to improve health.

According to dieticians, this food choice offers a number of nutritional benefits and reduces E. coli infections.

Production, slaughtering and consumption of meat are seen by many people as unethical and many claim ethical motivation, whether it be environment, economic or cultural.

Through history

There are many references to vegetarianism in history. A vegetarian ideology was practiced among religious groups in Egypt around 3,200 BC, believing in abstinence from meat as a purification process to reincarnation. Early philosophies like Hinduism, Brahminism, Zoroasterianism and Jainism saw the abstinence of meat as a central issue. Notable philosophers such as Pythagoras (viewed vegetarianism as a key factor in peaceful human co-existence), Socrates, Plato and Aristotle encouraged vegetarianism in order to avoid animal cruelty.

References to vegetarianism can be found from the Roman Empire and throughout history, vegetarianism has always existed in human society.

At the end of the 19th Century the cheap and nutritious meals offered at vegetarian restaurants were very popular in London. On September 1847 the Vegetarian Society was formed in London to inform and preserve vegetarian's interests.

The history of vegetarianism would be not complete without mentioning Mahatma Gandhi, who wrote extensively about a subject that was central in his life.

At the end of the 20th Century vegetarianism has gained more impetus due, in part, to environmental issues dominating the headlines. Some people see vegetarianism as part of the process of change and the conservation of resources.

Food, glorious food

• By Trevor Holman

I have numerous friends living both here in the Algarve and in the UK who claim to be vegetarians, vegans, gluten free, on a carbohydrate free diet, a starch free diet, or they're on the F plan diet or the 'I don't eat turnips picked by women dressed in yellow trousers before 8.30 am on Wednesdays if it is raining' diet or some other such weird criteria.

Are all these diets and food choices weird, or is it just me?

I don't remember all these various diets, food fads and different eating habits being around when I was a kid, but I suppose they must have been, or are they like most things seem to be these days - invented by a slick advertising agency somewhere in the world that were given the job of increasing the sales of parsnips.

Life without meat

My wife and I took some friends, one of whom is a vegetarian, to a local restaurant a few months ago and one the junior waiters whose English was not all that wonderful asked the Chef what it meant when our friend said she was a vegetarian. The Chef, a really friendly Portuguese, informed his young colleague with a smile that being a vegetarian was simply having an eating disorder.

Personally, I don't understand why some people are vegetarians. I guess most have a genuine reason but I asked one friend why they were a vegetarian and they said they don't eat meat because it's cruel to cows and sheep, but it doesn't stop them wearing leather shoes and woolly jumpers.

I asked a young girl recently why she was a vegetarian - didn't she like the taste of meat?

She replied that she had no idea what meat tasted like as she'd never tried it, but her mum was a vegetarian and she'd just grown up that way. She also said she was reluctant to try meat in case she liked it - I guess there must be some kind of vegetarian mafia she's scared of.

Allergies and aversions

Now I can understand people with allergies - being allergic to some food types can be quite dangerous and some people have to be careful about peanuts, for example. My own particular allergy is mushrooms. The last time I accidentally ate a mushroom was on my honeymoon in Kenya and I ended up becoming delirious and was totally out of it for four days with the local doctor visiting me three times a day. At least, so my wife tells me! I don't remember a thing.

I can also understand people that just don't like the taste of certain foods. I cannot stand cabbage, broccoli, spinach and brussel sprouts, my wife loathes curry and ginger, but loves chillies.

We're all very different, but that's a good thing as far as I'm concerned.

United nations

National food differences are always interesting. Whenever I'm in America it's not so much the different types of food that amaze me, it is the quantities. Statistics now state that one in five Americans are obese, with Florida being the leading state in the fat stakes.

If you go into a restaurant in the US and ask for breakfast you can get what we would describe as a full English breakfast, but in America they're not satisfied with that, so they add a plate full of pancakes covered with maple syrup, six different types of toast, a portion of hash browns, etc, etc.

It is all incredibly cheap and so you can understand why the average weight of Americans has increased by 22 per cent over the last 10 years.

Japan is another interesting case in point. Over the last 25 years, the average height of the Japanese population has increased by three and a half inches. A recent government report from Japan stated that the main cause of this was the introduction of McDonald's to the Japanese diet, particularly the young. For hundreds of years the Japanese have lived mainly on various foods based around rice and fish, and then McDonald's arrived and introduced the wonderfully fatty world of burgers and fries.

A lot of people talk about how wonderful French cuisine is, but I'm afraid it doesn't do it for me. As far as I'm concerned snails should stay unmolested inside their shells and truffles should remain in the ground or be eaten by the pigs that find them. I will always prefer strong Cheddar to Brie and as far as I'm concerned garlic is just about the most repugnant smell ever created.

Credit where it is due, the French do know how to produce a decent bottle of wine, but even that is now changing.

A recent report from one of the UK's leading supermarket chains said that for the first time ever, there were no French wines in their top ten best seller list. It was mainly Australian, Californian and South African wines with a decent showing from South America. It also reported that sales of Cava had now overtaken sales of Champagne.

Good old Blighty!

So what of British food? Well that's all changed as well. My dad used to enjoy Pease pudding and savalloys, or bubble and squeak. Then there were faggots, mushy peas, cockles, muscles, whelks, jellied eels, etc. Most of those are quite rare now and these days the jellied eel shops have all been turned into Indian restaurants or Chinese takeaways. Even good old cod and chips is fast becoming a rarity as the wonderful EU keep reducing the amount of fish the UK is allowed to catch and then Health and Safety won't let you wrap it in newspaper in case you get poisoned by the printing ink and sue someone.

As for puddings, well in the good old days it was always spotted dick and custard or a really good steamed syrup sponge. Bread and butter pudding seems to have now been replaced by boring cheesecake and it seems to me that this new fangled nouveaux cuisine is just a poor excuse to serve less food for at least double the price.

Fortunately though, you can still get a decent carvery in the Algarve. There is a truly excellent carvery in Almancil where for just €15 you can get the full works - three courses with roast beef, Yorkshire puddings, roast potatoes, proper gravy and all the veg you can eat.

Now that's what I call food... Glorious food!

Romanian minor found in Algarve

An 11 year old child who had been reported missing by her parents in Malaga was found by chance, safe, in Vila Real de Santo António last Saturday.

The girl had disappeared in Malaga, Spain at around 2.30am on Saturday. According to reports she had been at a fiesta with her parents and had gone to the car to listen to music. When her parents went to find her a few minutes after she had told them where she was going, she had disappeared.

Later that same morning a car with French number plates was ordered to stop by the local PSP in Vila Real de Santo António. The suspect, allegedly an east European, about 20 years old, tried to escape the police but was intercepted on the road that connects Vila Real to Montegordo.

The police apparently ordered the vehicle to stop as they thought it suspicious, although at that time no notification of the missing Romanian child had been given.

The car driven by the youth and transporting the child was discovered to have been stolen in the Spanish province of Navarra.

At the time of going to press it was not clear whether this was a case of kidnapping or whether the child had willingly left with the suspect.

The child was taken into the custody of the Social Services which was to arrange for the young girl to be reunited with her parents.

Candidate confirmed

In the search for a new chairperson at the Algarve Tourist Board the Socialists and Social Democrats are in agreement with the candidate backed by the Socialist Party, present Civil Governor of the Algarve, António Pina.

A notice published by the PSD on their web site cited the party's support for the candidacy of António Pina. The statement declared that: "In the opinion of the PSD/Algarve, and its regional representatives, the present Civil Governor of the Algarve, António Pina, has carried out his duties incorporating non-sectarian, non-discriminatory dialogue," adding that his attitude "guaranteed a balanced, sensible presidency".

The Algarve Observatory reported that Pina had confirmed he was prepared to take on the role at the RTA, saying: "I will do my best to unite a good team that reflects the interests of the business sector. They create jobs."

Apart from his current position, Pina also served as Regional Director of Education. He has no particular connection with the tourism sector.

Bungled burglar caught

The Faro Public Security Police successfully apprehended a burglar in the centre of Faro last Wednesday afternoon, but only after the home owner was subjected to a terrific fright.

The assailant entered the house by breaking down a door and the terrified tenant took refuge in the bathroom attempting to alert the authorities on a mobile phone. The burglar became aware that someone was in the house and broke down the door to the bathroom removing the phone so that the victim could not contact the police.

Afterwards the culprit made off with a portable computer and left the residence and its occupant, only to be detained rapidly by the police who had been notified of a disturbance by neighbours who had heard the victim screaming.

The criminal is known to the Faro Criminal Investigation department as one with violent tendencies, and is known to attack and rob people on the streets as well as breaking and entering. He is also suspected of various other crimes currently under investigation by the competent authorities.

Clean party in Faro

Last weekend Faro was host to a slightly different type of party where smoking, alcohol and drugs were prohibited. Around 200 people gathered in a bar and were treated to vitamin-filled cocktails without alcohol, a particular challenge for the barman who has been practicing his profession for two years already.

The event was organised by the Universidade de Yoga with the objective of: "alerting the general population that those who practice the philosophy of yoga are normal human beings who like to go out and have fun ... without using drugs."

Advertising investment

The Algarve Tourism Association (ATA) launched a promotional campaign on the television channels Eurosport and Eurosport 2 last week. The advertising offensive includes the transmission of 206 spots of 20 seconds each during top international sporting events and direct links to www.visit Algarve.pt site through eurosport.es and eurosport.fr. The first phase of the campaign is to run until the end of July and will be reinitiated in September for about two months.

Credit card support

The Association of Voluntary Firemen of Albufeira are to receive financial support via a credit card scheme in conjunction with the Crédito Agrícola bank. Any new card issued, known as cartão BV Albufeira, contributes €5 to the association automatically, and also a percentage of any purchase made on the card is donated to the bombeiros.

Allgarve suspended

The planned presentation in Vilamoura last Saturday to launch the Allgarve project was definitively suspended last Wednesday. A press release stated that the programme "maintains its objectives", promising to release the agenda soon.

Suspected traffickers

Two men were arrested by the Public Security Police (PSP) in Faro last Thursday night, suspected of dealing drugs. The suspects were identified during a stop operation on one of the city's roundabouts. The men, reportedly Moroccan, were in possession of around 1.500 portions of hashish. It has been reported that one the men has a warrant for his arrest issued by the Italian authorities.

Caught red-handed

Last Tuesday afternoon officers of the Almancil station of the Republican National Guard (GNR) arrested a man who had broken into a house in Sitio da Torre. The 37 year old man was apprehended by the GNR just 300 metres from the scene of the crime in possession of a mobile phone, a digital camera, a watch and clothes to the estimated value of €600.

The Thirteenth Tale

A cleverly written, captivating debut novel by Dianne Setterfield.

• By Wendy Davies

There are many twists and turns within this story, full of magic and nostalgia. The novel tells a well paced tale of Gothic intrigue with a modern slant. The story is based on Vida Winter, a best-selling yet reclusive novelist, who has invented many outlandish life histories for herself, not one of them the truth. Now old and ailing, at last she wants to tell the truth about her extraordinary life and wishes to have her biography written by a young girl who works in an antiquarian bookshop. Books feature a lot in this story and the characters are gripping and complex.

If you enjoy Daphne du Maurier or Rose Tremain you will find this novel enthralling. I did not want to put it down, but, on the other hand, I did not want to finish it too quickly. This book has been highly recommended by the book critics and Carol Birch in the Independent On-Line says: "it is a remarkable first novel, a book about the joy of books, a riveting multi-layered mystery that twists and turns, and weaves a quite magical spell for most of its length."

Muscle up – muscle training made easy

You probably think of Schwarzenegger types with muscles sculpted to the maximum. That's body building, the extreme of muscle training. Training your muscles serves to stimulate an improvement in strength and muscle resistance, not just to build up muscle mass, as in body building.

• By Nuno Parreira

Many people find themselves wary of muscle training because they do not want large bulky muscles and they think it easy to build them up. In reality this type of exercise can have different objectives for different people; those who wish to increase their muscle mass and those that wish to lose fatty mass. Everything depends on the way one exercises.

Generally the body is divided into different sections; hips, legs, abdomen, chest, back, biceps, triceps and shoulders. When beginning muscle training all muscles will be worked in the first session, doing one or two exercises for each section, after which no aching muscles should be evident. Initially the weight applied will be low in order for the person to learn to exercise correctly and slowly. By working out slowly to begin with the person can feel the muscles working.

This regime would be followed for about one month and the number of exercises, the order of exercising, the number of series and repeats for each exercise, the speed of movement and the rest period involved will vary and slowly be built up.

Entering into the second phase of muscle training the workout would be dedicated to two muscles per day, as we pointed out last week. The exercise becomes more intense, producing more results.

For those wishing to increase weight and muscle mass one would generally try to do three of four exercises for each muscle group, doing three to four series of each, attempting to use a weight which allows between six and 15 repetitions. To increase muscle one would repeat less but increase the weight, resting sufficiently in between each series in order to increase the weight applied.

To lose fat and increase muscle definition the training is different, using less weight in order to employ more repetitions, between 15 and 30. Rest time should be minimum to provoke maximum exertion of the muscles.

These exercises can be adapted to suit a person needs and abilities and it is important to vary training regularly, every one or two months, to recognise the different results from different exercises.

General principles exist, but each person is an individual and nobody knows better than ourselves how our bodies react to different stimuli.

• To increase muscle one would repeat less but increase the weight

The body contains three types of muscles:

The muscle which is anchored to the bone by tendons is known as the skeletal muscle or voluntary muscle. It affects all skeletal movement, like walking, running and writing and supports body posture. The muscle reflex that governs our posture is mostly subconscious, although the muscles will react to conscious control.

Hidden away, but working just as hard, is the smooth or involuntary muscle. This muscle type does not react to conscious requests and is found in the walls of organs like the oesophagus, stomach, intestines, lungs, urinary tract and blood vessels.

The heart has its own special muscle, the cardiac muscle, also involuntary but found nowhere else in the body.

Portuguese pronunciation:

LESSON 1

Generally, the penultimate syllable is always stressed, except where there is an accent, or the word ends with a diphthong (two vowels which are pronounced as a single syllable, we will deal with this in a later lesson), or if it ends with any of the following letters: i; l; r; z; im; um; ins; uns – in which case, the stress is on the last syllable.

The text under the Portuguese words that follow is a pronunciation guide, and represents an approximate phonetic equivalent of the word in English such as you might find in a phrase book. The pronunciation guide is based on a neutral London accent. The letters zh in the pronunciation guides indicate a soft j, which sounds like the s in leisure.

Practise saying the following words out loud following the rules above. The syllable represented in italics is the one that should be stressed. The meaning of the words is in the last row of each table.

DECO answers:

Consumer, or not?

Last month I went to a consumer advice organisation but was a little disappointed when I was told that they could not help me as my inquiry did not fall under that of a consumer, and that I should seek legal advice or the competent authority. I was seeking clarification with regard to a car accident, about 14 days before, in which I was not at fault. The other driver admitted he was at fault and made a claim with his insurance company, which has not helped. As yet no assessor has been to evaluate the damage. If these organisations which defend consumer rights cannot help me, who can?

The fact is that this lady was correctly informed as in her situation she is not deemed to be the customer under the current Consumer Rights Law, the law which governs consumer rights organisations and others. According to this law the consumer is considered to be anyone to whom goods or services are supplied, or the transferral of any rights, destined for non-professional use, by someone who is exercising a professional activity in order to profit. In this case, the complainant is not querying her own insurance company, but that of the other driver. Therefore there is no contract between the two parties, nor have any goods or services been supplied or any rights transferred. This case is clearly one of extra-contractual civil responsibility, which has nothing to do with consumer rights. In this case the interested party should seek legal advice or contact CIMASA (Vehicle Insurance Information, Mediation and Arbitration Centre), located in Lisbon and working throughout Portugal. This Centre was founded in collaboration with various organisations, DECO among them, and resolves, quickly, simply and economically, conflicts arising from car accidents, especially cases where the claimant contends the insurance company or others decisions, as in this case.

It is important to stress that not all car accidents can be handled by this centre. They are only responsible for accidents involving up to three vehicles in which no one is injured and that have been presented as claims to the relative insurers. Globe-trotting shrubbery

The influence of foreign plants on Algarvean gardening is unmistakable as one enjoys the vivid and exciting flowers from Australia, Africa or America that have adapted so well to the Mediterranean climate.

• Text and photos by David Rees

The Australian Bottlebrushes are great favourites, producing spikes of red or yellow flowers from April onwards. The Weeping Bottlebrush (Callistemon viminalis) is a tall weeping shrub, very graceful as the red bottlebrush flowers hang down in clusters.

The more shrub-like Crimson Bottlebrush (Callistemon citrinus) makes a handsome bush with its red flowers which are held more rigidly than the weeping bottlebrush and produces a more massed display of flower. The impressive sight of either of these two bottlebrushes in full flower certainly justifies them a place in any garden.

The seeds of the bottlebrush stay safely enclosed in little woody capsules for years on end. In their natural environment, a fire would heat the pods sufficiently to release their seeds and regenerate the bottlebrush from the ashes of the fire.

Another beautiful Australian plant grown in the Algarve is the Spider Flower (Grevillea banksiae) with its intricate red flowers. This is not an easy species to grow but well worth trying. Many of the Australian ornamentals have been hybridised into new forms and colours.

Caribbean creations

Lantana camara from the Caribbean is a very useful shrub in the garden. It is tough, resistant and grows quite quickly. The colours vary considerably from yellows, golds, pinks, whites and reds as well as a combined red and yellow. The florets of each flower start yellow and then turn to red. As some florets open earlier than others on the same flower head, one always has a bright mixture. Another advantage of Lantana is that it is much enjoyed by butterflies, particularly by Swallowtails. A hedge of Lantana provides a regular display of butterflies throughout the summer.

The Datura, or Thorn Apple, (Brugmansia X Candida) has more attraction for moths than for butterflies. The scent becomes stronger at night from this large white exotic flower which comes from Ecuador. There are several varieties available with double or single flowers or "sanguinea" with narrower red-edged flowers. The spectacle of a Datura in full flower makes it well worth planting in the garden, but beware of the sap which is poisonous. Daturas are easy and comparatively fast to grow under most conditions.

Another quick and easy shrub that gives a great deal of pleasure for little effort is Solanum rantonettii which produces its little potato flowers throughout most of the year. It spreads rapidly as a shrub and thrives on a certain amount of neglect.

For blue colour in the garden, one can use Plumbago (Plumbago capensis) which needs better treatment than the Solanum. Find somewhere with shelter from the wind and good soil. The Plumbago, once it gets going, gives a display of pale blue flowers from April to November. It grows best where it gets some support from a wall or a trellis to allow it to climb.

Latin lovers

Pampas Grass (Cortaderia selloana) from Argentina also thrives in the Algarve sunshine but grows better with a plentiful supply of water. There are pink varieties as well as the usual white Pampas, and a dwarf variety 'Pumila' which keeps to about one and a half metres high rather than the two to three metres of the ordinary variety. Pampas plumes look particularly good where they catch the late evening sunshine as the plumes wave to and fro in the breeze.

Eastern mystique

The beautiful but poisonous Oleander (Nerium oleander) is common throughout the Algarve and is a native to areas from the Mediterranean all the way to Japan. In the Algarve it grows wild, mostly along the river banks where it is watered by the rain torrents of winter, yet copes happily with the subsequent months of hot, dry weather. The wild form of the Oleander always has double pink flowers. This variety is the toughest. The colours vary from pink, dark pink, aricot, white and almost yellow. The yellow varieties tend to vary in colour depending on how much sun they get; the more shade, the deeper the yellow. All the colours come in single and double-flowered forms.

The double-flowered varieties perhaps make a better display but the dead flowers look untidy after flowering, whereas the single-flowered varieties look tidier as they drop their flowers. Oleanders flower from May until October. All parts of the Oleander are poisonous, but it is still one of the most successful shrubs in the Algarve.

Something that delights visitors who come from less temperate climates is the sight of plants which they know as houseplants or greenhouse plants growing here as bushes or trees. For example, the beautiful Silk Oak Tree (Grevillea robusta) grows here as a specimen tree to six metres or more.

Likewise the Hibiscus rosasensensis is a tender greenhouse plant nurtured indoors or outside in a pot during summer. But in the Algarve, it can be seen as hedges, bushes, even growing into small trees of three or so metres. Although the Hibiscus does not like frost, it grows well under most conditions in the Algarve. The hardier kinds, like the single red-flowered variety, will grow under very poor conditions. Others, for example, varieties with double yellow flowers or with twin colours, may be more sensitive and need better treatment. Many of the less vigorous varieties do well in pots on terraces or patios.

There are even Hibiscus with variegated leaves or the beautiful Butterfly Hibiscus (Hibiscus schizopetalus), the flowers of which hang down on delicate stems. The petals are intricately cut and curled, and surrounded by a long style that carries both stigmas and stamens, gently dusted in yellow pollen.

The Hibiscus originates from China but is one of the most beautiful and characteristic shrubs of the Algarve that lends a touch of the tropics to this European sun spot.

It's a dog's life

José Mourinho has been in the headlines on two accounts. Last Saturday his London based team Chelsea won the FA cup, at the prestigious new Wembley Stadium, ending a difficult season on a high. Didier Drogba scored the only goal in extra time, their first goal against Manchester United in two years. "This is a moment for everyone to enjoy and we deserve to go into the holiday period with this cup", said Mourinho. Meanwhile Yorkshire Terrier Leya, the pet dog of the Mourinho family has made headlines of his own when he allegedly broke quarantine rules, causing the detention of the Chelsea football manager in the week leading up to the game. The matter was cleared up when it was agreed the family pet would return to Portugal with Mourinho's wife Tami.

Porto takes the title

For the second year in a row Porto claimed the Championship title in Portugal. On Sunday evening Porto, Benfica and Sporting played their final games simultaneously with the title changing hands more than once throughout the 90 minutes. Porto beat Desportivo das Aves by four goals to one, Sporting won against Belenenses by four goals to nil and Benfica defeated Académica by two goals to nil. Both Porto and Sporting qualify for the UEFA Champions League next season.

Romario celebrates

Last Sunday former Brazilian international Romario celebrated the 1,000th goal of his career at a match in Rio de Janeiro, claiming a penalty in the Brazilian national chamionship between his team Vasco da Gama and Sport of Recife. The impressive tally has not been recognized by Fifa the international footballing body as it includes goals in youth, friendly and testimonial games. The celebrations on the pitch came immediately after he scored, taking 16 minutes out of the game before it could be restarted.

SPAIN

Migrants repatriated

A large number of migrants, believed to be over 750, have been expelled from the Canary Islands by the Spanish government. The illegal immigrants were predominantly Senegalese hoping to find prosperity by taking the dangerous boat journey from Africa to Europe. Some 30,000 individuals, including many children, attempted to enter the Canary Islands in 2006 but were prevented from doing so by the maritime service patrolling the islands. They arrive on small overcrowded boats where many die en route, having placed their hope in the traffickers who extort huge sums of money for the journey.

LEBANON

More violence

Fighting broke out between Lebanese troops and gunmen in a Palestinian refugee camp called Nahr el-Bared. Around 40 died including 27 Lebanese soldiers and 15 Palestinian gunmen in one day. Many more were injured in the intense fighting last Sunday, said to be the worst clashes since the end of the civil war 15 years ago. The problems escalated following the attempted arrests of a number of Fatah Islam men said to be suspects in a bank robbery who resisted arrest and then attacked army posts at the entrances of the refugee camp. The Lebanese troops retaliated by bombarding the camp and attacking a building used by the Fatah militants in Tripoli.

IRAQ

US soldiers die

A bomb planted in western Baghdad killed six US soldiers and an interpreter while they were patrolling the area searching for weapons and bomb-making materials and in a separate incident one US soldier died and two were injured in a bomb attack on a vehicle in Diwaniya, south of Baghdad. A policeman and civilians also died in a number of blasts which included a suspected chlorine gas attack during the weekend.

USA

Virgin low cost

The Virgin Group has succeeded in gaining approval to set up a US budget airline and is to launch new low cost internal flights starting with a shuttle service between San Francisco and JFK airport in New York. The current plan is to expand this to ten cities, with San Francisco as the hub of the operation using Airbus A319 and A320 aircraft.

KENYA

Game park gunfight

A battle broke out last weekend at a Kenyan game reserve leaving three wildlife rangers and four alleged poachers dead. A group of armed men attacked the rangers as they patrolled the area. Two assault rifles and axes were recovered from the scene. Kenya has long fought poachers eager to kill elephants for their tusks in exchange for high rewards in the illegal ivory trade.
